Acxius Strategic Consulting Announces Partnership with Attunity

Acxius Strategic Consulting partners with Attunity to help data warehouse customers gain access to their data and improve operational efficiency.

Morganville, NJ October 2, 2008 - Acxius Strategic Consulting, a management consulting and systems integration company today announced that it has partnered with Attunity, a leading provider of enterprise-class software for real-time event-capture and data integration. The partnership involves Acxius integrating the cost-effective change data capture Attunity Stream product to satisfy the need for immediacy and access to real-time data.

Attunity's change data capture (CDC) product makes it easy to capture, move, notify and act on changing data wherever it resides in the enterprise. Acxius plans to utilize Attunity Stream and the Attunity SSIS CDC Accelerator as Best Practice tools for those client data warehouses that need a maintenance friendly, scalable and high performing solution.

"We are pleased to extend our services to the market through this exciting new partnership," says Biswa Bhattacharya, Founder and CEO of Acxius. "With Attunity's proven, enterprise CDC platform, and Acxius' systems integration expertise, we will together enable customers to gain more efficient and precise analysis, thus making them more effective organizations."

Attunity's CDC solution has become a critical component in many major global data warehouse projects. Additionally, an increasing number of healthcare and other commercial customers are looking at integrating the Attunity CDC platform within their existing corporate enterprise resource planning (ERP) processes, for a variety of reasons including application synchronization, business event capture, and real-time business intelligence. Through the partnership with Attunity, customers will now find it easier to capture and utilize changing data from their existing systems as they happen, and integrate this information in real-time into new processes and applications.

“The partnership of Attunity and Acxius allows us to offer a technical advantage in building Near-Real-Time data warehouses,” said Robert Scott, Acxius’ Chief Technology Officer. “The ease of use and the quickness in which it takes to get Attunity up and running allows us to provide services to our clients that will give them a quick time-to-market of their applications. “

“We are very enthusiastic about our partnership with such a well respected player in the systems integration consultancy arena,” said Andy Bailey, Vice President of Marketing, Attunity. “In choosing implementation partners, it is important for us to find companies that truly understand the challenges customers are facing. We feel confident that Acxius has that understanding, and can provide its customers with a high level of value-added expertise on the Attunity Stream and Attunity SSIS CDC Accelerator products.”
